

Michele Dowling has been organizing kids into large musical numbers for as long as she can remember! As a competitive dancer from a young age, she did choreography for school productions starting in elementary school and continuing through college. Her summers while in college were spent directing musicals for a large community theater in Avalon, NJ. With a BA in English and Marketing from King's College, Michele participated in theatrical productions throughout college and into adulthood.

Becoming a mom of two kids with a passion for theatre is what brought Michele back to directing children's theatre as a career, and led to eventually creating what is now Young Performers Collaborative. Owning a family run theatre company is a dream come true for her.

Michele stands behind every child and believes that all children should have the chance to shine. YPC is a collaboration of family, friends, alumni, and a group of amazing kids who make the company such a unique and special place that Michele is so proud to have created.
